WRITE TO THE FUTURE OF SCOTLAND

INTRODUCING DEAREST SCOTLAND

Dearest Scotland invites you to write to the future of Scotland. 2014 is the year we decide, as a nation, our future direction.

But where are we going? What should it look like? What do we who live in Scotland actually think?

This is an apolitical campaign, focused on crowd-sourcing a future vision for Scotland by the public for a common good. We've created Dearest Scotland as a place where visions for the future of the country are collected and then published to be shared with the world. It's giving a sound to citizens' voices from all over Scotland.

HOW DOES IT WORK?

It's pretty simple. You can download a letter template from our website and send it back to us by email or post. Alternatively, you can pick up a letter pack from our post boxes located around Scotland, or attend a letter writing workshop. And for lovers of digital, you can directly input your vision on our online letter submission app.

The ins and outs of everything can be found on our website dearestscotland.com

WHAT SHOULD A LETTER CONTAIN?

Anything. You can write as much or as little as you want. You can write from the heart or articulate a future vision. It might be poetic, romantic, harsh, critical or angstful.

You can write in first, second or third person. It can be fictional or factual. We leave it down to you, all we ask is that you start with Dearest Scotland...

OUR ASPIRATIONS?

First, we want letters. Lots of them. As we go we will create a digital archive online. Then we aim to publish a book of letters and commission artistic pieces using the letter content. Then hold an exhibition in Scottish Parliament. Then open up a smart data site that analyses the letter. Roughly in that order. Overall, we just want to hear your voice and create a collective range of vision.
